STAR SONG. By Robert Underwood Johnson.

LIBRARY
UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA
SAN DIEGO

When sunset flows into golden glows,
And the breath of the night is new,
Love, find afar yon yearning star -
That is my thought of you.

And when your eye doth scan the sky
Your lonely lattice through,
Choose any one, from sun to sun -
That is my thought of you.

And when you wake at the morning's break
To rival rose and dew,
The star that stays in the leaping rays -
That is my thought of you.

HIS BIRTHDAY TOMORROW

Writes Tribute to Roosevelt, but Views Recognition of Russia as Mistake.

Dr. Robert Underwood Johnson, poet, editor and diplomat, his eighty-first birthday still actively interests projects, including his of the Hall of Fame, allow the observance of the Hall of Fame, which he is preparing a volume "Hall of Fame," which he is preparing for publication Summer. His last book, entitled "Aftermath," was published last month During the day Dr. Johnson received many congratulations from all parts of the late in the afternoon, at he prepared to receive some friends informally at his home Lexington Avenue. To his surprise he found that they had arranged a musical program for the occasion by Henry Hadley, composer and conductor. They were Dr. Johnson's "Irish Song," and "The Star Song," "Strephon to Chloe," "Irish Song," and "The Star Song."

His Own So

MALLARANNY BEACH.

Nothing is here but beauty: a blue dome,
Cloudless, in Ireland the land of cloud;
A bluer sea, not clamoring with the loud
Homeric music of the waves that roam
The rocks and inlets white with angry foam,
But gentle as a lion's sleep; yon proud
Blue sloping headland, firm as though it plowed
The yielding sea, as the keen share
the loam.
'Twixt here and home nothing but beauty lies
Across the lonely leagues from land
to land.
Ocean, thou confidant of smiles and sighs,
Tell her who lingers on another strand
That I forget not, but as evening dies
I write a name of beauty on the sand.

ROBERT UNDERWOOD JOHNSON

A SONG OF AGE.

What is it that makes a lifetime?
To hold the manly strength
Of youth's rejoicing strife-time
Till it reaches the Psalmist length
Is it worth the strain of the long years' pain
To keep the body alive?
Would you rather be old at eighty
Or young at thirty-five?
The fairest tree in the orchard
That makes the Maytime bright,
By pest and the tempest tortured,
May droop with early blight.
And many a flame of a promising name
That men thought might survive
To light the world at eighty,
Dies down at thirty-five.
But if still the heart beat steady,
With Love as its only note,
And the world's need finds you ready
To pull in the common boat;
And you've learned that Beauty's the helpmate of Duty
To keep the soul alive:
Would you rather be young at eighty
Than old at thirty-five?

THE OLD VALENTINE.

When you were at your fair fourteen,
And February was at his (Ah, nothing sweeter could have been,
As nothing sweeter is),
There came among your valentines
One all made up of loving lines
With Cupid's darts
Through bleeding hearts
(Were his initials accidental?)
You kissed the rhymes
A hundred times
And never thought them sentimental.
At forty—life's most lonely age—
When valentines come not,
Go seek again that treasured page
Unseen but unforgot.
One poignant moment let a tear
Flow for a boy's love so sincere:
That tribute give
Whereby shall live
The lost, so tender and so gentle.
Thank heaven that still
'Mid prose and ill,
You can, in dream, be sentimental.

First Lines : Italian Khapsody

"Dead is old Greece," they mourned ere yet arose
Dear Italy! The sound of thy soft name
Forgive us, Italy, who have loved thee long
Gay or gloomy with her skies
My perfumed jasmine-tent commands
Not in the five-domed wonder
Of Time and Nature still the fairest daughter
Once, when I saw the tears upon your vines
One forgets not the first dead he sorrowed over
Rome, symbol of all change, oh, change not here
The wind is Winter, though the sun be Spring
They halted at the terrace wall
This is the loggia Browning loved
Thou of a poet's blood, and many a tie
We lingered at Domo d'Ossola
When sunset flows into golden glows
Yonder's the window my poet would sit in
You who were once bereft of Rome

IN AN ARBOR, ASOLO

By Percy G. Pinkerton

My perfumed jasmine-tent commands
An outlook vast along the lands.
Northward, green hills confront my gaze,
Shrouded in filmy morning haze.
Their smooth sides take a deeper dye

As the red sun deserts the sky,
When clouds, like poppy-petals, fall
And fade around a purple wall
Whose top one fain would tread and ship God according to his heart's desire we are still fighting the religious wars of the Middle Ages? In our country there is no excuse for bigotry or intolerance. Let us fight it wherever it appears. Perhaps I over-estimate the importance of my can-tankerous correspondents. The radio audience is so large that it must necessarily include a certain number of cranks and fire-eating numbskulls. At any rate they have taught me the importance of preaching and teaching tolerance on all possible occasions."

* * *

As his own publisher, Robert Underwood Johnson is issuing from his office in New York a volume of his hitherto uncollected poems entitled "The Pact of Honor and Other Poems Grave or Gay." They will include the title poem, apropos of the Briand-Kellogg Treaty; "The New Olympians" (the aviators); "The Hall of Fame, at Night"; personal poems on Eleonora Duse, Raquel Meller, Henrik Ibsen; impressions of travel in Italy, France and Switzerland; and "A Grave at Stockbridge," dealing in part with the subject of immortality. Lighter poems in the collection are "The Young Chevalier," the ballad of Lindbergh, "The Amateur Circus" and "A Sentimental Journey in Ireland."

TO ALL WHO LOVE ITALY

Johnson Reads His Sonnet.

Then Robert Underwood Johnson, wearing the academic robes bestowed on him when he received the degree of Doctor of Letters from New York University, read the following sonnet written by him for the occasion:

HENRIK IBSEN.

A Tribute of an Idealist.

For bare forms of thought should we contend?
I claim him realist; I hail him here,
Lifelike, acute, alive, profound, sincere.
Archlight of souls where vice and virtue bleed;
Of the faltering conscience lest it bend
Before the blast of circumstance, in fear.
Destructive of cant; ironic seer;
Enemy to the people, but their friend.
Nothing of Dante is not far to seek
In his grim faithful surgery we see
Lending wrong from right and strong from weak.
Dreaded to Sophocles he well may be,
Even to the Three Fates of the ancient Greek
Adds a fourth, in man's heredity.
Then came more Norwegian music,
Including with the Norwegian na-

STREPHON TO CHLOE.

Dear, not tomorrow but today
Give me the laggard word I crave
Love is no jewel put away
In velvet silence; wear it brave
Upon your bosom, joy-entwined.
Oh, hasten, hasten to be kind.
Come, honor love with use today;
Make it a gift and not a debt.
See how the hours speed away;
Shall each be laden with regret?
Beauty was made not for the blind;
Then hasten, hasten to be kind.

I suffer now, but how much more
Shall you, when, in Time's retrospect,
You shall your cruelty deplore
On which your happiness was wrecked?
Lest love shall leave you far behind,
Hasten, beloved, to be kind.

ST. MARK'S REVISITED

Robert Underwood Johnson

Let me stand here where first I saw of old

This triple wonder - the supreme surprise,

However often it may greet the eyes

Of sated travelers; see the sunlit gold

Beneath the encrusted arches like a mold

Of dashing waves; fancy the gray domes' rise

From their poised flight, but to less heavenly skies -

All lovelier than all poets ever told.

How feminine she is, this Orient Queen!

Trailing her skirts of marbled lace along

Beside the Piazzetta, while the Tower,

Like Strength defending Beauty, stands serene.

'Tis the world's dream, this dream of Joy and Power,

Caught in the permanence of Art and Song.

...The New York Times, Jan. 12, 1929.

“A CITY WITH A SOUL”

(FLORENCE)

GAY or gloomy with her skies,
Gray Paris like an opal lies
Sparkling on the front of France.
Avignon doth hold a lance
In a tourney-list with Nîmes.
Fair Seville basks in helpless dream
Of conquest, as in caged air
Dreams the tamed lion of his lair.
Regal Genoa still adorns
Her ancient throne; and Pisa mourns.
Now we traverse holy ground
Where three miracles are found:
One of beauty—when with dyes
Of her own sunset Venice vies.
One of beauty and of power—
Rome, the crumbled Babel-tower
Of centuries piled on centuries—
Scant refuge from Oblivion's seas
That swept about her. And the third?—
O heart, fly homeward like a bird,
And look, from Bellosguardo's goal,
Upon a city with a soul!
Who that has climbed that heavenly height
When all the west was gold with light,

And nightingales adown the slope
 To listening Love were lending hope,
 Till they by vesper bells were drowned,
 As though by censers filled with sound—
 Who—who would wish a worthier end
 To every journey? or not blend
 With those who reverently count
 This their Transfiguration Mount?
 —From "The Winter Hour."

SAVORING JOY.

Haste not to joy: harbor the sweet suspense.

The sun surprises not the world with light

But dawns with ever-lessening reticence.

Nor is the starry curtain of the night
 Let fall ungently. Yon full river flood

Paused often at some meditative pool.

The rose holds back its glory in the bud

And Nature's temple has its vestibule.

So let your wooing be: first, with such look

That Fate must wait till your one word be spoken;

Then choice; then tenderness; and then the token

Of clasping hands, caressing and caressed.

When you have turned these pages of Love's book

The loved one may peruse with you the rest.

ROBERT UNDERWOOD JOHNSON.

ITALIAN RHAPSODY*

I

DEAR Italy! The sound of thy soft name
Soothes me with balm of Memory and Hope.
Mine, for the moment, height and sweep and slope
That once were mine. Supreme is still the aim
To flee the cold and gray
Of our December day,
And rest where thy clear spirit burns with unconsuming flame.

II

There are who deem remembered beauty best,
And thine, imagined, fairer is than sight
Of all the charms of other realms confessed,
Thou miracle of sea and land and light.
Was it lest, envying thee,
The world unhappy be,
Benignant Heaven gave to all the all-consoling Night?

* Read before the Mother Chapter of the Phi Beta Kappa Fraternity, William and Mary College, February 10, 1902.

III

Remembered beauty best? Who reason so?

Not lovers, yearning to the same dumb star

That doth disdain their passion—who, afar,
Seek touch and voice in velvet winds and low.

No, storied Italy,

Not thine that heresy,

Thou who thyself art fairer far than Fancy e'er can show.

IV

To me thou art an ever-brooding spell ;

An old enchantment, exorcised of wrong ;

A beacon, whereagainst the wings of Song
Are bruised so, they cannot fly to tell ;

A mistress, at whose feet

A myriad singers meet,

To find thy beauty the despair of measures full and sweet.

V

Of old, ere caste or custom froze the heart,

What tales of thine did Chaucer re-indite,—

Of Constance, and Griselda, and the plight
Of pure Cecilia,—all with joyous art !

Oh, to have journeyed down
To Canterbury town,
And known, from lips that touched thy robe, that triad
of renown!

VI

Fount of Romance whereat our Shakspeare drank!
Through him the loves of all are linked to thee
By Romeo's ardor, Juliet's constancy.
He sets the peasant in the royal rank;
Shows under mask and paint
Kinship of knave and saint,
And plays on stolid man with Prospero's wand and Ariel's prank.

VII

Another English foster-child hadst thou
When Milton from the breast of thy delight
Drew inspiration. With a vestal's vow
He fed the flame caught from thy sacred light.
And when upon him lay
The long eclipse of day,
Thou wert the memory-hoarded treasure of his doomed sight.

VIII

Name me a poet who has trod thy soil ;
 He is thy lover, ever hastening back,
With thee forgetting weariness and toil,
 The nightly sorrow for the daily lack.
 How oft our lyric race
 Looked last upon thy face!
Oh, would that I were worthy thus to die in thine embrace!

IX

Oh, to be kin to Keats, but as a part
 Of the same Roman earth!—to sleep, unknown,
Not far from Shelley of the virgin heart,
 Where not one tomb is envious of a throne;
 Where the proud pyramid,
 To brighter glory bid,
Gives Cestius his longed-for fame, marking immortal
 Art.

X

Or, in loved Florence, to repose beside
 Our trinity of singers! Fame enough
 To neighbor lordly Landor, noble Clough,
And her, our later sibyl, sorrow-eyed.

Oh, tell me—not their arts,
But their Italian hearts
Won for their dust that narrow oval, than the world more wide!

XI

So might I lie where Browning should have lain,
My “Italy” for all the world to read,
Like his on the palazzo. For thy pain
In losing from thy rosary that bead,
England accords thee room
Around his minster tomb—
A province conquered of thy soul, and not an Arab slain!

XII

Then take these lines, and add to them the lay,
All inarticulate, I to thee indite:
The sudden longing on the sunniest day,
The happy sighing in the stormiest night,
The tears of love that creep
From eyes unwont to weep,
Full with remembrance, blind with joy, and with devotion deep.

XIII

Absence from thee is such as men endure
 Between the glad betrothal and the bride ;
Or like the years that Youth, intense and sure,
 From his ambition to his goal must bide.
 And if no more I may
 Mount to Fiesole . . .
Oh, then were Memory meant for those to whom is Hope denied.

XIV

Show me a lover who hath drunk by night
 Thy beauty-potion, as the grape the dew :
 'T were little wonder he were poet too,
With wine of song in unexpected might,
 While moonlit cloister calls
 With plashy fountain-falls,
Or darkened Arno moves to music with its mirror
 light.

XV

Who can withstand thee? What distress or care
 But yields to Naples, or that long day-dream
We know as Venice, where alone more fair
 Noon is than night ; where every lapping stream

Wooes with a soft caress
Our new-world weariness,
And every ripple smiles with joy at sight of scene so rare.

XVI

The mystery of thy charm—ah, who hath guessed?
'T was ne'er divined by day or shown in sleep;
Yet sometimes Music, floating from her steep,
Holds to our lips a chalice brimmed and blest:
Then know we that thou art
Of the Ideal part—
Of Man's one thirst that is not quenched, drink he howe'er so deep.

XVII

Thou human-hearted land, whose revels hold
Man in communion with the antique days,
And summon him from prosy greed to ways
Where Youth is beckoning to the Age of Gold;
How thou dost hold him near
And whisper in his ear
Of the lost Paradise that lies beyond the alluring haze!

XVIII

In tears I tossed my coin from Trevi's edge,—
 A coin unsordid as a bond of love,—
 And, with the instinct of the homing dove,
I gave to Rome my rendezvous and pledge.
 And when imperious Death
 Has quenched my flame of breath,
Oh, let me join the faithful shades that throng that fount above.

LOVE IN ITALY

THEY halted at the terrace wall ;
Below, the towered city lay ;
The valley in the moonlight's thrall
Was silent in a swoon of May.
As hand to hand spoke one soft word
Beneath the friendly ilex-tree,
They knew not, of the flame that stirred,
What part was Love, what Italy.

They knew what makes the moon more bright
Where Beatrice and Juliet are,—
The sweeter perfume in the night,
The lovelier starlight in the star ;
And more that glowing hour did prove,
Beneath the sheltering ilex-tree,—
That Italy transfigures Love,
As Love transfigures Italy.

SALVINI

"DEAD is old Greece," they mourned ere yet arose
This Greek—this oak of old Achaian graft
Seed-sown where westward tempests wept and laughed,
As now when some great gust of heaven blows
From lair levantine. How the giant grows!—
Not to lone ruin of a withered shaft,
But quaffing life in every leafy draught,—
Fathered by Storm and mothered by Repose.

Nay, doubt the Greeks are gone till, this green crest

In splendor fallen, round the wrack shall be
Prolonged, like memories of a noble guest,
The phantom glory of the actor's day.
Then, musing on Olympus, men shall say
The myth of Jove took rise from lesser majesty.

THE HOUR OF AWE

Not in the five-domed wonder
Where the soul of Venice lies,
When the sun cleaves the gloom asunder
With pathways to Paradise,
And the organ's melodious thunder
Summons you to the skies ;

Not in that rarest hour,
When over the Arno's rush
The City of Flowers' flower
Looms in the sunset flush,
And the poignant stroke from the tower
Pierces the spirit's hush ;

Not Rome's high vault's devising
That builded the heavens in,
When you know not the anthem's rising
From the song of the cherubin,
Where, sight and soul surprising,
Dusk utters your dearest sin :

Not these—nor the star-sown splendor,
Nor the deep wood's mystery,
Nor the sullen storm's surrender
To the ranks of the leaping sea,
Nor the joy of the springtime tender
On Nature's breast to be;

But to find in a woman's weeping
— The look you have longed to find,
And know that in Time's safe-keeping,
Through all the ages blind,
— Was Love, like a winged seed, sleeping,
For you and the waiting wind.

TITIAN'S TWO LOVES, IN THE BORGHESE

ONE forgets not the first dead he sorrowed over ;
One forgets not the first kiss of the first lover.
Not the dust of ages could remembrance cover
How in Titian's golden kingdom first I strayed.

Oh, that Roman morning's azure, softly sifting Through the gray, the while the rapt eye caught the rifting
Of the sun's rich fire where molten mists were drifting,
As one looks upon an opal gently swayed.

Ah ! but in the palace there was sun more golden !
Art for once to Nature was no more beholden.
Man to his belovèd had the passion olden
Sung in color, and his mighty Love grew Fame.

For I guessed, while hotly others were contending
Which was Love Divine, that each to each was lending
Supplemental graces for a perfect blending—
That to paint one twofold woman was his aim.

One without the other's beauty were but torso :
 Human needs divine, ah, yes, and—maybe more so—
 By divine is needed. (Singing down the Corso
 I, elate, enthralled, went, happy just to be!)

Yet till thee at last I knew—each blended feature
 Where the two Loves meet in rightly balanced nature—
 Never had I known a tithe of Titian's creature :
 God, the master limner, painted both in thee.

BROWNING AT ASOLO

(INSCRIBED TO HIS FRIEND MRS. ARTHUR BRONSON)

THIS is the loggia Browning loved,
 High on the flank of the friendly town;
These are the hills that his keen eye roved,
 The green like a cataract leaping down
 To the plain that his pen gave new renown.

There to the West what a range of blue!—
The very background Titian drew
 To his peerless Loves. O tranquil scene!
Who than thy poet fondlier knew
 The peaks and the shore and the lore between?

See! yonder 's his Venice—the valiant Spire,
 Highest one of the perfect three,
Guarding the others: the Palace choir,
The Temple flashing with opal fire—
 Bubble and foam of the sunlit sea.

Yesterday he was part of it all—
 Sat here, discerning cloud from snow
 In the flush of the Alpine afterglow,
 Or mused on the vineyard whose wine-stirred row
Meets in a leafy bacchanal.

Listen a moment—how oft did he!—
 To the bells from Fontalto's distant tower
Leading the evening in . . . ah, me!
Here breathes the whole soul of Italy
 As one rose breathes with the breath of the bower.

Sighs were meant for an hour like this
 When joy is keen as a thrust of pain.
Do you wonder the poet's heart should miss
This touch of rapture in Nature's kiss
 And dream of Asolo ever again?

"Part of it yesterday," we moan?
 Nay, he is part of it now, no fear.
What most we love we are that alone.
[His body lies under the Minster stone,
 But the love of the warm heart lingers here.

"LA MURA," ASOLO, June 3, 1892.

TO ONE WHO NEVER GOT TO ROME

(EDMUND CLARENCE STEDMAN)

[ON his long-deferred and only trip to Italy Stedman entered the country from the north for what proved to be a very brief sojourn, for soon after reaching Venice he was suddenly obliged to return to America. It remained his cherished desire to see the Eternal City, and the Roman Committee of the Keats-Shelley Memorial long hoped that he might be present at the proposed dedication of the Keats House, contemplated for the 23d of February, 1908. He died five weeks before that day, when the lines which follow were written. As the active and devoted Chairman of the American Committee he took a leading part in this project. Probably his last words written for publication on a literary topic were in praise of the two poets, to which he added a transcription from "Ariel," his ode on Shelley.]

You who were once bereft of Rome
With but the Apennines between,
And went no more beyond the foam,
But loved your Italy at home
As others loved her seen :

You knew each old imperial shaft
With sculpture laureled to the blue ;
Where martyr bled and tyrant laughed ;
Where Horace his Falernian quaffed,
And where the vintage grew.

The Forum's half-unopened book
 You would have pondered well and long;
And loved St. Peter's misty look,
With vesper chantings in some nook
 Of far-receding song.

Oft had you caught the silver gleams
 Of Roman fountains. To your art
They add no music. Trevi teems
With not more free or bounteous streams
 Than did your generous heart.

I hoped that this Muse-hallowed day
 Might find your yearning dream come true:
That you might see the moonlight play
On ilex and on palace gray
 As 't were alone for you;—

That your white age might disappear
 Within the whiteness of the night,
While the late strollers, lending ear
To your young joy, would halt and cheer
 At such a happy wight;—

That you,—whose toil was never done,—
Physicianed by the Land of Rest,
Might, like a beggar in the sun,
Watch idly the green lizard run
From out his stony nest;—

That you, from that high parapet
That crowns the graceful Spanish Stairs,
(Whose cadence, as to music set,
Moving like measured minuet,
Would charm your new-world cares),

Might see the shrine you helped to save;
And yonder blest of cypresses,
That proud above your poets wave.
Warder of all our song, you gave
What loyalty to these!

The path to Adonais' bed,
That pilgrims ever smoother wear,
Who could than you more fitly tread?—
Or with more right from Ariel dead
The dark acanthus bear?

Alas! your footstep could not keep
 Your fond hope's rendezvous, brave soul!
Yet, if our last thoughts ere we sleep
Be couriers across the deep
 To greet us at the goal,

Who knows but now, aloof from ills,
 The heavenly vision that you see—
The towers on the sapphire hills,
The song, the golden light—fulfils
 Your dream of Italy!

THE SPANISH STAIRS

[It will be recalled that the house in which Keats died adjoins the Spanish Stairs in Rome. It has been proposed to remove the fountain below them to make room for the tramway in the piazza.]

ROME, symbol of all change, oh, change not here!

Thou, ever avid of beauty, who shall say

Thou hast forsworn it in a vain display

And blare of discord, as though eager ear

Listening for nightingale heard chanticleer?

Oh, leave these sunny stairs, that float and stray

From fountain blithe and flowers' rich array

To beckoning bells and chanting nuns anear.

Of all the dead that loved them, hear that voice

Whose sorrow and last silence once they knew,

Whose spirit guards them with his flaming theme,

The immortal joy of beauty. Oh, rejoice,

And stay thy hand: that future ages, too,

By them may mount to heaven, like Jacob in his dream.

PIAZZA DI SPAGNA,
St. Agnes' Eve, 1903.

THE NAME WRIT IN WATER

(PIAZZA DI SPAGNA, ROME)

The Spirit of the Fountain speaks:

YONDER 's the window my poet would sit in
While my song murmured of happier days;
Mine is the water his name has been writ in,
Sure and immortal my share in his praise.

Gone are the pilgrims whose green wreaths here hung for him,—
Gone from their fellows like bubbles from foam;
Long shall outlive them the songs have been sung for him;
Mine is eternal—or Rome were not Rome.

Far on the mountain my fountain was fed for him,
Bringing soft sounds that his nature loved best:
Sighing of pines that had fain made a bed for him;
Seafaring rills, on their musical quest;

Bells of the fairies at eve, that I rang for him;
Nightingale's glee, he so well understood;
Chant of the dryads at dawn, that I sang for him;
Swish of the snake at the edge of the wood.

Little he knew 'twixt his dreaming and sleeping,
The while his sick fancy despaired of his fame,
What glory I held in my loverly keeping :
Listen ! my waters will whisper his name.

SPRING AT THE VILLA CONTI

OF Time and Nature still the fairest daughter,
 Low-voiced Repose! Here thou dost ever dwell,
 While Fancy wills no more to wander on.
With how few simples dost thou steep the sense,
 Holding in soft suspense,
 Like pauses in the tolling of a bell,
 The beauty coming and the beauty gone.
Nothing is here but woods and water,
 Spaces, and stone, and a sculptor's wit
 Simply to fashion it
Into one long line of many niches,
Whose fountains are fed by the rushing riches
 That, bowl to bowl, from the woodland pool
 Fall in a rhythm clear and strong,
 Singing to Nature her eldest song,
 Prattling their paradox—restfully restless.
O March, with never a moment zestless,
 Nor the sun too warm nor the shade too cool!
O May and the music of birds now nestless!
 Come soon and brood o'er the woodland pool!

(For lover or nightingale who can wait?

Whenever he cometh he cometh late.)

The light plays over the ilex green,

Turning to silver the somber sheen,

And Spring in the heart of the day doth dwell

As the thought of a loved one dwells with me,

And only three cypresses to tell

"This is not Heaven, but Italy."

FRASCATI, March, 1903.

COMO IN APRIL

THE wind is Winter, though the sun be Spring :
The icy rills have scarce begun to flow ;
The birds unconfidently fly and sing.

As on the land once fell the northern foe,
The hostile mountains from the passes fling
Their vandal blasts upon the lake below.

Not yet the round clouds of the Maytime cling
Above the world's blue wonder's curving show,
And tempt to linger with their lingering.

Yet doth each slope a vernal promise know :
See, mounting yonder, white as angel's wing,
A snow of bloom to meet the bloom of snow.

Love, need we more than our imagining
To make the whole year May? What though
The wind be Winter if the heart be Spring?

THE VINES THAT MISSED THE BEES

(TO COUNT COSIMO RUCELLAI OF FLORENCE WITH A
COPY OF HIS ANCESTOR GIOVANNI RUCELLAI'S POEM "THE BEES")

ONCE, when I saw the tears upon your vines
You told me they were "weeping"—but for what?
I find their secret in your kinsman's lines:
They missed the honeyed music he has caught.

THE POET IN THE CHILDREN'S EYES

(TO COUNTESS EDITH RUCELLAI, DESCENDANT OF JOSEPH
RODMAN DRAKE,—IN HER ALBUM, CONTAINING LINES BY BROWNING, LONGFELLOW, LOWELL, AND OTHERS)

THOU of a poet's blood, and many a tie
Of kin or friendship with the singing race :
How shall I dare, without a throb or sigh,
Near these lost bards beloved my name to place !

One wish I offer, though with halting fingers :
That in thy brood, of eager eyes divine,
The poet that within the mother lingers
May find a voice worthy the deathless line

FLORENCE, April, 1906.

FAREWELL TO ITALY

WE lingered at Domo d'Ossola—
Like a last, reluctant guest—
Where the gray-green tide of Italy
Flows up to a snowy crest.

The world from that Alpine shoulder
Yearns toward the Lombard plain—
The hearts that come, with rapture,
The hearts that go, with pain.

Afar were the frets of Milan ;
Below, the enchanted lakes ;
And—was it the mist of the evening,
Or the mist that the memory makes ?

We gave to the pale horizon
The Naples that evening gives ;
We reckoned where Rome lies buried,
And we felt where Florence lives.

And as Hope bends low at parting
For a death-remembered tone,
We searched the land that Beauty
And Love have made their own.

We would take of her hair some ringlet,
Some keepsake from her breast,
And catch of her plaintive music
The strain that is tenderest.

So we strolled in the yellow gloaming
(Our speech with musing still)
Till the noise of the militant village
Fell faint on Calvary Hill.

And scarcely our mood was broken
Of near-impending loss
To find at the bend of the pathway
A station of the Cross.

And up through the green aisle climbing
(Each shrine like a counted bead),
We heard from above the swaying
And mystical chant of the creed.

Then the dead seemed the only living,
And the real seemed the wraith,

And we yielded ourselves to the vision
We saw with the eye of Faith.

Then she said, "Let us go no farther :
'T is fit that we make farewell
While forest and lake and mountain
Are under the vesper spell."

As we rested, the leafy silence
Broke like a cloud at play,
And a browned and burdened woman
Passed, singing, down the way.

'T was a song of health and labor,—
Of childlike gladness, blent
With the patience of the toiler
That tyrants call content.

"Nay, this is the word we have waited,"
I said, "that a year and a sea
From now, in our doom of exile,
Shall echo of Italy."

Just then what a burst from the bosquet—
As a bird might have found its soul!
And each by the halt of the heart-throb
Knew 't was the rossignol.

Then we drew to each other nearer
And drank at the gray wall's verge
The sad, sweet song of lovers,—
Their passion and their dirge.

And the carol of Toil below us
And the pæan of Prayer above
Were naught to the song of Sorrow,
For under the sorrow was Love.

Alas! for the dear remembrance
We chose for an amulet:
The one that is left to keep it—
Ah! how can he forget?

THE CROWNED REPUBLIC

I

FORGIVE us, Italy, who have loved thee long,
Daughter of Beauty, Cynosure of Song,
That we who knew thee fair should not have known thee strong.

For Beauty is no weakling, taking odds
From earthly Power and cringing at its nods,
But giver of sovereign laws to immemorial gods.

She is no mere contriver of design,
Of thrilling color or uplifting line;
She sings within the soul a music all divine.

And when she sets the ardent youth aflame
With duty, brooking no unworthy aim,
She is but Justice honored by another name.

II

We should have read the roster of thy great
Who from mismated fragments inchoate
The fair mosaic made of thine harmonious state;

Alike in nothing but in love of thee
While thou wert yet a dream of Liberty,
They gave thee all they were and all they hoped to be:—

He of Savoy, first man and then a king ;
He of Caprera, armed with David's sling ;
He of Turin, who won with wise imagining ;

He of the Tuscan vineyards, firm as steel ;
And he of Genoa, priest of the common weal,
And he whose voice to Venice was a tocsin-peal.

O land for whom thy sons were fain to die
As lovers are to live ! No obloquy
Their secrets could unlock, their purpose turn awry.

In thy deep dungeons Freedom grew to might,
Nourished by darkness as the rose by light.
Would tyrants conquer Thought : they must abolish Night.

Behind the bars where Settembrini dwelt,
Beside the chains whose scars Poerio felt,
Above the beds bereaved where dauntless women knelt,

Thine image, as in Dante's vision, shone—
The Italy that some day would be one,
When alien yoke was cleft and cruel sands were run.

III

Now, when the old oppressor of thy land
Had weakly chosen by his side to stand
Who holds the torch and bribe in either treacherous hand,

Thought they to fright thee by war's awful price,
Or silence thee by lure of paradise—
Thee with thy glorious ancestry of sacrifice?

Forgive us, we were over-slow to scan
The incredible cunning of the monstrous plan
Whereby the spider State has set its web for Man;

But fallen are the scales, and now our heart
That with thee stormed the startled Alps, takes part
With glad and welcome aid from mint and mine and mart.

And, haply, on thy waves our ships may dare
The iron shark within his stealthy lair
Till the freed seas forget what late was their despair.

Oh, fortunate if our torn flag be found
Comrade of thine on some embattled ground
Thenceforth by Garibaldi's memory made renowned.

What name in all thine epic history
But his to summon us and trumpet thee—
Who found his foster land what thou wert born to be!

Pillar of cloud and fire, his spirit soar'th
Above thy eager legions pressing forth
And cheers them on to save their brothers of the North.

O Crowned Republic, let us be of those
Who know and conquer all the people's foes—
Without, within—that dare the gates of Freedom close.

THE WISTFUL DAYS.

What is there wanting in the spring?
The air is soft as yesteryear;
The happy-nested green is here,
And half the world is on the wing.
The morning beckons, and like balm
Are westward waters blue and calm.
Yet something's wanting in the spring.

What is it wanting in the spring?
O, April, lover to us all,
What is so poignant in thy thrall
When children's merry voices ring?
What haunts us in the cooing dove
More subtle than the speech of love,
What nameless lack or loss of spring?

Let youth go dally with the spring.
Call her the dear, the fair, the young;
And all her graces ever sung
Let him, once more rehearsing, sing.
They know, who keep a broken tryst.
Till something from the spring be missed
We have not truly known the spring.

Designated Poet Laureate of America

In a word, he was an American school, most of you know what I mean. His poetry, copious was of the old class and often unintelligible to a poet with hardly such things. He was a man of his contemporary, Aldrich once called in his "Age of American Literature."

And to sum it up by a fellow critic, "a man of pleasure, and who called him the Poet Laureate."

He left a strong impression deep perhaps, since the flow more rapidly in place too rapidly summed perfectly and development meant to this country.

A MADRIGAL OF ASPETOOK.

Call it river or call it brook,
Give me the shady Aspetook!
Far-heard within the Summer hush,
The music of its prattling rush
Robs not the valley of repose;
And whether it pauses or whether it flows,
It makes a never-ceasing call
To the urchins of dreamy Merryall.
The boy in wild-grape-scented June
Through open windows hears the tune,
And, caught in the thrall of Aspe-took,
For-longing cannot see his book;
His hope plays truant to his fear.
Seasons there are for sled and ball,
But Aspetook through all the year
Beckons the boys of Merryall.

Past the thick refuge of the deer,
Yet within sound of chanticleer,
Through green-arched tunnels of delight
It breaks into the sunny air
To greet the bathers of "Monverre";
Then hurries round the rocks in flight,
As though the world were waiting all
For news of drowsy Merryall!

Some day my feet will follow down
Its gentler current toward the sea,
To find its merge by Milford town
Where calms of Housatonic be.
Today I'll mount through shade and gleam,
Wade my cool way against the stream,
And challenge every swirl and fall
Of Aspetook to Merryall.
